"The Mikado" Here Monday
To Raise Funds For Finns

Famous Gilbert and Sullivan Operetta To Be Presented at Grand Theater

Gilbert and Sullivan's highly-praised operetta, "The Mikado," will show at the Grand theater Monday night as a benefit to the local Finnish relief fund drive.

All receipts of the show will go to swell the fund, which, at the end of last week, showed a $450 tally. Contributions this week are not known since the contribution boxes, scattered throughout the city, have not yet been checked. It was announced by Dr. Richard C. Harwood, chairman of the campaign. Theater officials and workers are giving their services and time.

"The Mikado," as a motion picture in technicolor, is considered one of the most important events in current film history. It is a comparatively new picture and is being brought to Salem especially to aid the Finnish relief drive.

The Gilbert and Sullivan fans who have waited for a motion picture of "The Mikado" will get it as they could never hope to see it on the stage unless they live in London or New York. The popular musical play has been filmed with all the rainbow brilliance of its beautiful Oriental costumes captured in technicolor.

The complete cast and chorus of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co., most famous of all Gilbert and Sullivan troupes, whose musical forebears first produced "The Mikado" on March 14, 1885, to start runs of 672 London and 250 New York performances, are featured.

Kenny Baker, popular radio tenor, sings the leading role to the accompaniment of the London Symphony orchestra. Victor Schertzinger, who brought to the screen Grace Moore's success, "One Night of Love," directed the film.

House Vote Strengthens
Hull, Mentioned For Presidency

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Senate opponents conceded today that the triumph of Secretary Hull's trade agreements program in the house last night foreshadowed continuation of the policy in some form.

They served notice, however, that they would make a vigorous effort to attach restrictive amendments to the extension bill which the house approved, 216 to 168.

The house vote, which gave the administration a victory in the first big legislative test of the session and strengthened Secretary Hull's position at a time when he was being mentioned as a possible Democratic presidential nominee, shifted the battle to the senate side of the capital.

Up to the Senate
Up to the senators now is the question: Shall congress grant the executive branch of the government, for three more years, power to enter into reciprocal agreements with other countries concerning tariff reductions and other trade concessions? The present grant of authority along these lines expires June 12.

The senate opponents said they would line up behind these proposals:

1. An amendment requiring that the agreements be ratified by a two-thirds majority of the senate before they could become effective.
2. A proposal to set up a congressional "check" providing limits on tariff reductions.
3. An amendment to eliminate the "most-favored-nation" theory of the existing reciprocal trade program, by which concessions granted one country are extended to all others which the government decides are not discriminating against United States goods.

Supported By Taft
Senator Adams (D-Colo.) said the yardstick proposal would prohibit the reduction of tariffs below the point where the production cost of foreign goods, plus the tariff, would be less than the cost of production of competing American goods. Support to this idea came from Senator Taft (R-Ohio).

Adams and Taft also favored elimination of the "most-favored-nation" policy.

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, predicted that virtually all Republicans would vote against continuance of the trade program. However, Taft told reporters:

"I am in favor of the reciprocal method, because it is much preferable to congressional log-rolling (the practice of members of congress voting for each other's pet projects). But some standard should be provided to insure that the program will be on a protective rather than a free trade basis."

"I don't favor senate ratification, because that simply would kill the whole program."

Taft suggested that when an agreement was drafted it be referred to the tariff commission, which would readjust all items providing reductions deeper than the amount which would equalize the difference in cost of American and foreign production.

PROBE ROBBERY

Sheriff and Aids Called
By Homeworth Supply Company

LISBON, Feb. 24.—Sheriff M. K. Duty was called to Homeworth Friday to investigate a robbery which netted the burglar only 47 cents. Thieves had gained entrance to the Homeworth Supply company building some time Thursday night by breaking a window, and after taking what change had been left in the cash register, made their escape by way of a door without disturbing anything else in the store.

Sheriff Duty secured several pieces of glass from which Deputy Sheriff Howard Clark took fingerprints.

Two more county prisoners were taken to the Mahoning county jail for boarding on Friday. They are Howard McLain of Wellsville, Jack Morgan of East Liverpool. McLain was fined $100 and costs in Mayor W. H. Daugherty's court at Wellsville on charges of assault and battery while Morgan was assessed a fine amount in the East Liverpool municipal court on intoxication charges.

Ministers of Three Nations Meet Today and Sunday

(By Associated Press)
COPENHAGEN, Feb. 24.—With the flames of two wars threatening to engulf their countries, the foreign ministers of Denmark, Sweden and Norway jointly sought today means of halting the sinking of their ships, bombing of their towns and violation of their territorial waters, while still maintaining their neutrality.

Foreign Ministers Dr. Peter Munch, Denmark; Halvdan Koht, Norway, and Christian Gunther, Sweden, scheduled meetings this afternoon and Sunday.

Anxiety mounted in the Scandinavian countries as these problems faced their statesmen:

- (1) Repeated sinkings of Norwegian, Swedish and Danish ships by submarine and mine action. The three countries already have lost more than 50 ships totalling about 165,000 tons with a loss of 600 lives.
- (2) Settlement of the Altmarek incident in which British warships invaded Norwegian territorial waters to seize 299 British seamen imprisoned on a Nazi ship.
- (3) The bombing of the Swedish town of Pajala near the Finnish border. Sweden said Russian planes did the bombing; Russia has denied it.

The conference of the three ministers is their second since last Dec. 7 when they met at Oslo to consider means of negotiating peace in the Finnish-Russian war.

Even as Koht left Oslo last night for the conference, the sinking of two more Norwegian ships and the setting fire to a third in the North sea were reported.

Norwegian newspapers attacked unrestricted submarine warfare as the "purest piracy."

The ministers were expected to seek some means of halting the sinkings and also to see Britain to modify her blockade measures so neutral ships would not be forced through danger zones to control stations.

Norway was concerned particularly with the ramifications of the Altmarek case. Among these were reports indicating that allied warships were patrolling the Arctic coast off northern Norway, apparently with the intention of halting German shipments of high grade iron ore from Kirkenes, northern Norwegian port.

The British have severely criticized Norway for allowing German ships to traverse her territorial waters.

CHINA MAPPING

80 Divisions Are Declared
Ready To Mass
For Drive

SAN FRANCISCO—Chiang Kai-shek, has 80 fresh, well trained divisions which have not yet been used in the Japanese war but will be within 18 months, according to Dr. T. Z. Koo, Chinese scholar and statesman.

China has a 50-50 chance of winning the war with such an offensive, Dr. Koo believes, who recently left China. He reported that Chiang was building a "new China" in the western provinces.

Dr. Koo is lecturing on behalf of the World Christian Student Association, which has headquarters at Geneva.

Discussing the war, Dr. Koo said: "Japan has too few soldiers trying to hold too great a victory. The Japanese army, when it began the war, was first rate. Now it is third rate."

Industries Are Developed
"Since the war began, China has developed its industries to where it now can supply its own arms and munitions except for the heavier and more technical instruments."

From the financial point of view, China has adequate external credit because of barter agreements with the United States. Great Britain and Soviet Russia.

"Internally, the financial situation is not so good, because the Japanese have captured most of the great seaports which formerly contributed about half of China's internal revenue through import taxes. Throughout the interior of China, however, tax collections are nearly as large as before the war."

Limbach Calls On Coshoc-

Governor

(By Associated Press)
NEWARK, Feb. 24.—Leading Ohio Democrats put on a display of harmony last night at a rally apparently untroubled by an earlier invitation for Harry A. Caton of Coshoccon to enter the crowded race for the party's gubernatorial nomination.

The invitation for Caton, former chairman of Ohio State university trustees to become the eighth candidate for governor at the May primary was issued by Arthur Limbach, Democratic state chairman, at a meeting in Caton's home town.

"I am glad to be in Coshoccon, the home of Harry Caton, who I personally think would make a fine candidate for governor," said Limbach. "He has my permission to get his petitions out now."

Limbach's invitation was heard by former Gov. Martin L. Davey and other party leaders speaking in behalf of Byron B. Ashbrook of Johnstown, Democratic candidate for congress in Tuesday's special 17th district election.

Speakers then came here to join leading Democrats in addressing more than 1,000 persons at a meeting presided over by Attorney George McDonald of Newark, runner-up to Ashbrook in the special district primary Feb. 6.

Murray Tells Court How She Spent Nights On Park Bench

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—When she married Georgian Prince David Mdivani, Mae Murray, blonde star of silent films, was worth $3,000,000.

Ten years later, without funds, she spent three days in New York's Central park—sitting on a bench.

This was the story Miss Murray told in court in a suit to force Mdivani to pay her $1,000 for the support of her 13-year-old son, Koran David Mdivani.

Relating the incident in September, 1938, to Superior Judge George Dockweiler, Miss Murray said:

"I had walked out of my marriage a bankrupt—that is a matter of record."

Judge Dockweiler said he would send interrogatories to a New York judge who would ask the son with which parent he preferred to live.

Trumbull Dispute
Reaches High Court

COLUMBUS, Feb. 24.—A dispute between Trumbull county Democrats over appointment of an elections board member reached the supreme court today. Filing of a mandamus suit was delayed temporarily, however, because the petition was not on the proper size paper.

Counsel for the Leroy Marceau faction brought the suit to compel Secretary of State Earl Griffith to name Mrs. Margaret O'Neill of Girard to the board. A faction headed by William B. Kilpatrick is seeking appointment of Herbert L. Fisher of Warren.

Griffith will make no selection until after March 1. The Democratic state central committee recommended last Saturday that he recognize the Kilpatrick group.

Marceau's petition, which did not conform in paper style to those required by the court, related that his faction had been recognized previously by the Democratic state executive committee and the Trumbull county common pleas court.

PLAYING IN ROAD,

Youngster, Skull Fractured, Dies In Salem
City Hospital

Columbiana county's traffic death toll for the year was raised to three today, following the death at 8:10 p. m. Friday in Salem City hospital of Ray Archie Crawford, six-year-old Elkton lad who was struck by an automobile while playing along the highway near his home at 2 p. m. Friday.

The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crawford of Elkton, died of a fractured skull.

Playing With Wagon

State Patrolmen P. D. Barnes and C. W. Cale said their investigation showed that the boy was playing with a toy wagon beside and on the highway and as the automobile approached, the wagon rolled out of his grasp and he darted after it and into the side of the car.

The door handle on the left side of the machine caught him in the head, inflicting the fatal wound.

Driver of the machine was Miss Edna G. Fawcett, 21, of 410 Elm st., East Liverpool, the officers said. She was riding with Guy V. Dignan, of R. D. 1, East Liverpool, owner of the car, the officers reported.

The tragedy happened in front of the lad's home on the Clarkson-Elkton road, just three-tenths of a mile from the junction of Route 154. The boy had been skating nearby with an elder brother and had returned home only shortly before the accident occurred, the state patrolmen said.

The victim was taken to the office of a Lisbon physician and then removed to Salem city hospital.

First Grade Student

A student in the first grade of the Elkton school, Ray was born at Elkton July 29, 1933. Besides his parents, he is survived by two brothers, Norman and Noah, at home; a sister, Mrs. Gerald Boring, of Lisbon; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Crawford of Elkton, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dicken of Washingtonville.

The funeral service will be held at the home at 2 p. m. Monday, in charge of Rev. H. W. Middleton, pastor of the Elkton and Rogers Methodist churches. Burial will be in the Kemble church cemetery. Friends may call at the home Sunday.

The state patrol reported that no one was injured when automobiles operated by Harry W. Scranton, 20, of Alliance, and Harry R. Johnston, Jr., 22, of Beaver Falls, Pa., side-swiped on the Damascus rd., one-half mile west of Salem, at 6:10 a. m. today.

ONE AT A TIME

A vital point is being missed in the third term debate. Perhaps it is being ignored.

The debate is narrowed down always to the question of whether or not it is proper for President Roosevelt to seek and perhaps to get a third term.

Such a basis is too narrow. First, it should be extended to whether it is proper for any president to seek and perhaps to get a third term. There are men in congress today who went on record not so many years ago against a third term for Calvin Coolidge—and some of them are saying a third term for Mr. Roosevelt would be fine. They should be made to decide on the general principle at stake before their opinions are given weight. Needless to say, some of them favor a third term only for those they favor. They would be reluctant to say anything that could be used sometime in the future to support the third term candidacy of someone not of their personal persuasion.

Then there is the other and really vital point of fourth, fifth and sixth terms, which probably holds the key to a third term. Those who think three doses of Mr. Roosevelt would be good for the country should be willing to tell how many more doses they favor. They should explain whether they're marching in a third term campaign or a "Roosevelt Forever!" campaign. When these moot points had been cleared up the third term debate could proceed with a better show of intellectual honesty on the part of those taking the affirmative.

OUR REPRESENTATIVE DEMOCRACY

First purpose of a census in the United States is to determine the basis of representation in the lower house of congress. Everything else is incidental. The Constitution mentions nothing else.

Yet, oddly in view of so much devotion to the advantages of representative democracy, reapportionment of legislators following the 1940 census is far from certain, despite a law passed in 1929 making reapportionment mandatory and automatic. The law recognized that some congressmen can be depended on to do nothing hurtful to their political interests; e. g., not to reapportion the house unless forced to do so. Between 1910 and 1930 no reapportionment was made.

However, by spreading a legal net to keep such congressmen in line the law's framers unwittingly outwitted themselves. They provided that the President must submit a new basis of apportionment to congress within one week of "the second regular session" of each congress after the 71st. That would have been sometime next December, as matters stood in 1929. But in 1933 the "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution caused "the second regular session of the 76th congress" to open on Jan. 3, instead of next December. The census had not been taken. The President was unable to comply and reapportionment has lapsed by default.

This hardly seems to be the "perfection of reason" that is supposed to be the law. Something better is expected of the congressional lawyers by their clients.

PSYCHOLOGY OF CHEESE

By roundabout paths arrives the information that London school medical officers are having trouble getting British schoolboys to eat cheese, proposed as a likely substitute for butter.

The trouble, in all probability, is not the product, but the name. In English slang, cheese is something that would be the nuts in the United States. "You old cheese" is the same as "You old potato."

The psychology of borrowing the names of edibles for slang is bad. Thus, in this country, hash has fallen into disrepute, though it is one of the few really noble things done by cooks. And cheese, which is colloquial slang for something of indifferent value, like tripe, also is an innocent victim in some quarters, to the deep concern of the millions who know better.

In the London medical officers' report on how to restore the prestige of cheese, incidentally, is the information that the boys like it much better if something has been done to it, such as roasting. It then ceases to be just plain cheese, a household word, and becomes a rabbit or perhaps a soufflé. In the United States, blessed with commercial radio programs, the same aura is cast over cheese with far less trouble by identifying it with music and charming connotation, keeping the name intact.

POSTSCRIPT

Nationwide interest in the recent Louisiana runoff primary must be presumed to spring from desire to see the forces of reform triumph over the late Huey Long's juggernaut organization. (Note: all candidates promised to eliminate corruption, except the Long machine's candidates, who naturally could not admit there was any corruption.)

A little exercise with a pencil, using latest available returns from Louisiana, reveals that the margin of triumph over corruption; i. e., the majority of the Sam Houston Jones vote over the Long machine vote—was approximately 3.8 per cent. In other words, out of something like 540,000 votes cast there were only 3.8 per cent more votes against the machine than there were for it. The hasty conclusion that Louisiana has been made safe for purity seems premature.

We have never been able to figure out a way to use up any advantage the time spent waiting when a barber puts a hot towel on our face and goes off somewhere and forgets us.

-For Monday, February 26.

Monday's astrological forecast is for some rather ingular, perplexing and dubious situations. But these may bring progress, success and personal gratifications if cautiously and sagaciously manipulated. It will take shrewd insight and tact, especially with superiors or those having decisions to make.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of rather curious or intriguing experiences, in which keen insight, vigilance and shrewdness may be required to circumvent certain strategies. Unique developments may demand forethought and finesse in handling superiors. Step cautiously all the way.

A child born on this day may have a set of unusual qualities and talents, with curious slants which call for early understanding and proper direction. These may develop into highly constructive virtues.

Rear Admiral Nimitz is quoted as saying: "A ship is called She because it costs so much to keep one in paint and powder." The parallel should not be carried too far; it is the mate who foots the bill.

Here is a noted astrologer who is quoted as saying: "President Roosevelt cannot get a third term." But he can get another astrologer.

The Finns have no right to complain about the Red army being well armed, as that apparently has become the chief source of Finnish munitions.

The Truth About Leprosy Discussed By Clendening

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I WAS walking along a street in New Orleans with my wife a few weeks ago, and there approached us a young man who wore dark goggles, evidently had a good deal of his nose destroyed and two white patches on his cheek. My wife shuddered at this gruesome sight, and as he passed us he brushed her arm. She asked me what was the matter with him and I replied, "Only leprosy," at which I had a young domestic explosion on my hands.

I reassured her that leprosy, contrary to popular belief, is hardly contagious at all, and when we got to Mexico City I persuaded her to visit the leper sanitarium there. I visited the only continental United States leprosarium (there is one in Honolulu) near New Orleans his month. This sanitarium is located at Carville. All the states are authorized to send their lepers to his institution, a model of its kind.

Der. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

which takes care of about 400 lepers constantly, the year round. Sometimes they get away and we occasionally find them wandering around the roads of California, but they are usually glad to return to the leprosarium.

Of Great Antiquity
Leprosy is a disease of great antiquity, although most of the lepers described in the Bible and in medieval times probably were suffering from some other condition. Very few parts of the world are entirely free from the disease. Leprosy is common in China, Japan, the Philippines, Australia, India, Arabia, Iceland, the Scandinavian countries and Russia.

There are several forms of leprosy. In the commonest form the germ invades the nose and infiltrates from the nose into the skin of the cheek. In the course of time this invasion assumes a nodular form so that the skin on the cheek and forehead is thick and lumpy. The patients have a leonine expression. In the other form the germ invades the nervous system and it is characterized by flat white spots on the skin, usually on the hands and legs. These spots become numb and contractures of the tendons occur so that there is a claw hand or foot.

Chaulmoogra Oil Used
Treatment of leprosy today is very satisfactory with the use of a preparation known as chaulmoogra oil. In a report of the United States Public Health Service I find that 23 per cent of the patients, after treatment, can be paroled, as no longer even a faint menace to the public. Ninety-one per cent of the remaining under treatment are either improved or become stationary.

The belief that leprosy is very contagious still obtains, yet there are a good many lepers wandering around the country. One that I know of visits skin clinics regularly and exhibits himself to students for 25 cents a look.

"RED EARTH" by TOM GILL

CHAPTER XXIX

Minutes passed—minutes that might have been hours. He could not tell. It was marvelously quiet within that shaded place, and from outside came only the drowsy humming of bees. Then—he must have sensed a shadow fell across the doorway, and Alison Neale entered.

Instantly alert, he looked up, and nodding quick reassurance, she knelt at his side.

"How are you?"

He tried to smile. "Anyone can have this shoulder who wants it," and she saw with a start of alarm that the man was still bleeding.

"Did you throw them off?" he asked. "They passed here—close."

"I left a plain trail into the mesquite, then I back-tracked and circled. Beyond the grove there was a band of horses grazing, so I threw out saddles in the bushes and turned Coronado loose with the others. They were grazing with the others when I left. The raiders would be looking for saddleless animals."

Seeing the pallor of his face, Alison started to her feet. "I can't bleed like this. We've got to do something. Can you stand up?"

"I'm afraid I can't walk far."

"Just into that back room. It's safer there. I'm going to get Antonio."

"Can you trust her?" the voice was only a tired whisper now.

In desperation the girl raised both hands to her throat. "I've got to trust her."

Weakly Douglas gained his feet, and throwing an arm about his waist, the girl half lifted, half guided him into the narrow room beyond, then laid his rifle within easy reach. One backward glance, and she hurried toward the high adobe wall that encircled the mission.

A well worn path led beneath the shadow of the wall, and soon Alison reached the little clump of dwellings occupied by the mission's caretakers and servants. At the nearer cabin she entered. A middle-aged peon woman was bending over a smoking fire, and at sight of Alison, her eyes lighted with pleasure.

"The señorita never fails me. She pointed toward the cot, where a little child lay sleeping. "Conchita is better now, but yesterday the fever was high. Shall I awaken her?"

"The child can wait, Antonia. It is I who need help now."

Seeing the suffering in Alison's eyes, the woman made a frightened sign of the cross. "Whatever the señorita would have will be done."

Alison searched her face. "I have not seen you, Antonia. I am putting a man's life in your hands—more than a man's life. I am trusting you with the freedom of every hacienda in the border."

Quietly the woman answered. "I swear by every saint of heaven you can believe in me, now and always."

Looking down into those brown, unswerving eyes, Alison made her decision. "Sense Douglas is wounded by the raiders. He is hidden in the old cell beyond the wall. I want bandages first of all."

"Dios!" Hurrying to a corner, Antonia returned with hands full of white linen. "This will serve. And here, a blanket, señorita. I will take the broth of chicken for him that he may gain strength."

At the door Alison turned again. "Remember, no word. Not even to the padre."

"As God lives," the other answered, "not a word!"

Hastening along the path, Alison made her way back to the cell to dress Douglas's wound. The bullet had passed through the thick muscles of his shoulder and out again, showing no signs of having struck the bone. With hands that trembled in spite of her, she bound strips of linen about his shoulder, then gently laid him back against the wall.

Hardly had she finished when the sound of voices aroused her, causing Douglas's eyes to open and his hand to reach out for the rifle, but making a gesture of caution, Alison crept to the further room.

On the far edge of the clearing two men stood gazing intently at the ground, and with a tremor of fear she recognized the larger as Ed Paxton. Shrinking back from the door, she watched them. Like hunting dogs at fault, they appeared to be following the tracks of the two horses, and once Paxton looked across the clearing toward the cell. Frozen stark still, she could almost feel the man's cold eyes on her, but in another moment she heard his grating voice.

"Looks like they stopped here and went back. Mebbe—" The voice ceased. His eye caught a gleam of sunlight on the branch of a locust that Douglas had broken. Thoughtfully his stubby fingers felt its fresh yellow surface, and with new interest he faced again toward the cell.

"I'm just thinkin' Paxton drew his revolver. 'I'm thinkin' it might be a bright idea to look inside that place.' Gun in hand, the man stepped forward."

Darting to Douglas's side, Alison laid a warning finger against her lips, then seizing the blanket, ran to the outer room. A glance assured her that Douglas was invisible to anyone beyond her entrance, and pulling off her flannel shirt, she crumpled it into a pillow then rolled up in the blanket close to the wall just as heavy footsteps crunched outside the door.

Through half shut eyes she saw Paxton peer into the cell's dim obscurity, but at his first step across the threshold she sat bolt upright.

"Who's that?" Her voice rang sharp with alarm.

Startled, the man whirled, his weapon leveled at the girl's breast, then slowly the grimace of amazement died away and only a bewildered look remained in his close-set eyes.

"It's me—Ed Paxton."

The blanket had slipped from her shoulders, and reaching back, the girl drew the flannel shirt about her. "What do you want here?"

"We're looking for Jack Douglas and Sam Record."

"You don't expect to find them here, do you?" Then as he stood silent and irresolute, "What do you want with them?"

"Just a little friendly conversation, mebbe." His eyes scanned the cell at his feet. "We seen them makin' for this thickets of mesquite."

Alison shook her head. "I heard horses breaking through the brush about an hour ago, but it sounded more like a dozen than two."

"Which way were they bound?"

"North."

Paxton glanced back at his companion. "That's where their tracks were leadin' all right."

"But how do you know it was Jack Douglas and Record?"

"You can't mistake Coronado or that pinto of the rangers. It was them all right." He stood blinking at her, his slow thoughts grappling with an insoluble situation, and once the old suspicion returned to his eyes. "What are you doin' up here Miss Alison?"

"I came last night to take care of Antonio's little girl."

"You sure choose exclusive sleeping quarters."

"I'm beginning to think they're not half exclusive enough. What time is it?"

He glanced at the sun. "Must be gettin' near eight o'clock."

Disarmed surprise showed on the girl's face. "Eight o'clock! I'll be terribly late. Go over to Antonio's. Ed. She'll have a cup of coffee for us. I'll be after you as soon as I get on my boots."

She caught up with him just outside the Mexican hut, where the blended fragrance of coffee and the sizzle of frying tortillas were rising from a battered stove-pipe. Glancing behind her, Alison saw that Paxton's companion was leading the horses across the clearing, and seeing her turn, Paxton asked, "Where's your mare, Miss?"

"In one of the pastures, I suppose," Alison answered indifferently. "Antonio took her down to water last night."

As they entered the room, Alison's eyes flashed a warning to the woman inside, and the slightest tightening of Antonio's features told her it had not been missed.

"Buenos dias," she greeted them in hissing border Spanish.

"Muy buenos," Paxton stamped in. "You seen anything of two riders—one on a big roan and the other on a little pinto pony?"

The woman shook her head. "No señor."

Disbelief darkened his face. "Don't lie to me, you she-cat. Their tracks went by less than a hundred yards from here."

Alison looked toward her sleeping child, and her black eyes were defiant.

"If the señor must talk so loud let it be outside. Here there is much sickness."

But the smell of tortillas was in the man's thick nostrils, and he grinned at Alison. "All of which reminds me I ain't had a mouthful of breakfast. Suppose we divide them tortillas, Miss Alison."

"I'm only taking coffee." In spite of the compelling need for calm, she could feel her voice grow dangerously thin at the thought of this man lingering there. With every passing moment she wanted so desperately to get back to Douglas, to bring aid before it was too late. Even now it might be too late. If only something would make Paxton leave!

Something did, just an instant later. It may be that Antonio sensed the girl's plight, or it may be that she too was no less eager for this unwelcome guest to go. But as Paxton reached for the coffee pot a cup of boiling grease slipped from the woman's hand and fell full on his hairy wrist. Howling, he plunged his arm into a bucket of water, then ripping a towel from the wall, wrapped it about the blistered skin.

"You clumsy—" He stopped with an effort, for the child, awakening, had begun to cry weakly, and Alison raised the pinched, trembling form in her arms.

Who Invented the MOUSETRAP?

You've often heard the old adage: "Let a man make a better mousetrap, and the world will make a beaten path to his door."

But have you ever happened upon that path, or even looked for it?

Why should you, when the people who today have things to sell beat a path to your door to tell you about them?

Every newspaper that comes into your home brings you a new list of what you can get, and where. You can do your shopping in the advertising pages — instead of beating a path from store to store to find what you want.

Make it a habit to look over the advertisements, and you'll find many fine values you might have missed... many exciting and useful things you otherwise might never have known about.

UTAH PROJECT RISES SLOWLY

Provo River Reclamation Work Is Hampered By Weather

PROVO, Utah.—Cold weather and constant threat of storms has slowed work but construction on the $15,474,000 Provo river reclamation project—largest ever undertaken in this state—is going ahead and is 40 per cent completed.

Largest unit of the project is the Deer Creek dam, being built on picturesque Provo river in the Wasatch mountains above here. When finished, the dam will be the second largest earth-fill dam ever built under supervision of the Federal reclamation department.

The project is designed to provide storage and distributing facilities to supplement the irrigation supply of some 100,000 acres of farm lands in Salt Lake and Utah counties and provide additional domestic water for cities and communities adjoining the irrigated areas.

The dam itself will be about 1,300 feet long at the crest and 250 feet in height above the river bed. At the base, the dam will be 800 feet wide and more than 1,000 feet—a fifth of a mile—thick.

Into the dam between layers of rip-rapped rocks will go 3,000,000 cubic yards of earth, enough to cover 20 acres to a depth of 155 feet. The dirt will be in six vertical layers, each performing a special duty in keeping the water from seeping through.

Lake To Be 7 Miles Long
Water will not start forming a lake behind the dam until 1942—

RAID SHELTERS HELP PARISIENS

Early Tenseness of War In Capital Is Not Evident Now

PARIS—The new "underworld" of Paris, the abris (air raid shelters), are ready and waiting if the Nazi bombers some day roll down to the Seine.

But the tension here does not exist in the high degree that prevailed in the first few weeks following France's declaration of a state of war against Germany on that sunny afternoon of Sept. 3. Even at that time thousands of Parisians were scurrying from the capital. Americans and other foreigners had been rushing to trains and coastal ports so that by Monday all trains were jammed, far-away country villages were filling up and a watchful government was doing everything to get the city evacuated before Germany should attempt to rain death and terror on France as it had done on Poland.

The rush for gas masks had been going on for days. Those lucky enough to obtain them never left them behind. The gas mask, either in a tubular can or a canvas bag, became a part of the wearing apparel. Those who still awaited them carried an ample supply of handkerchiefs, lint, cotton to be dampened and held before the mouth and nose in case of emergency.

Posters Appear Everywhere
Suddenly as from nowhere almost every street door of every building in Paris bore a big white paper poster with the word "abris" printed on it in big black letters. Underneath, was the numerical capacity of the abris written in blue pencil, such as "Abris-36 persons" or whatever number the abris might be able to accommodate. With the appearance of these abris, Parisians felt more secure. In fact, the abris had been the result of a careful survey which began more than five years ago.

The streets were almost deserted those first few days of the war. Cafes were closed, stores were shuttered up, many hotels closed their doors, and at least one-third of the restaurants pulled down their iron shutters. Waiters had been mobilized, women had left for the provinces and proprietors took an enforced vacation.

The blue wash called gouache which covered every window, making a depressing blue glare, turned dead black at 11 P. M. Few taxis rolled along, their headlights dimmed in blue.

World War Recalled
Thousands recalled the same experiences as in the World War, after German planes and a long range gun began bombarding the city. It was different this time because fear of the Hitler-Goering-Goebe's "blitzkrieg"—the lightning blast of death and devastation which Berlin had promised—impelled people to enter the abris.

And the abris—coal cellars, wine cellars, cavernous depths under all of Paris—were damp, dusty, musty and happily, badly ventilated, for the ventilators, like little iron grills at the base of the buildings along the pavements had all been mysteriously and efficiently plastered up. This was to prevent gas or liquid fire from pouring in.

Bargains are plentiful. The ads. will tell you where.

LENTEEN MEDITATION
Isaiah 53: 6

"All we like sheep have gone astray." The prophet here employs a very simple figure of speech. But simple as it is, it lays bare all the hideousness and hopelessness of our lost condition. Man has strayed from the fold of his Heavenly Shepherd. He is wandering in a wilderness of sin and death. He is completely lost to God. By his own efforts he can never find the way back. He is doomed.

That description includes our whole race. The prophet exempts neither his own people nor himself. "All we like sheep have gone astray." The prophetic indictment goes farther. "We have turned every man to his own way." The sheep have lost the right way. They now are irresistibly pulled along the wrong way. What that involves is graphically portrayed in Romans 1: 18-32.

Humanity thus lost and doomed has only one hope; that the Shepherd will go after His straying sheep and Himself bring them back to the fold. And that is what God has done. In Christ He has sought and found men. "And the Lord laid on Him the iniquity of us all." That iniquity prevented restoration. First that iniquity had to be removed. God did that by transferring it to His Son, the Man of Sorrows, our Provy. Therefore was He wounded and bruised. Therefore the awful scene of the Passion occurred.

Now we are returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls. The mark of the beast is fading. The glorified Christ says of the Christian: "I will write upon him my new name."

It is walking with Him in holy memory along this last journey to Jerusalem that ended in His glorious resurrection. Holy contemplation to reach the ecstatic state is not his aim, but sacred meditation that will bring him in living communion with his 'ever living' Lord is his object."

We forget the same philosophy of Pythagoras, 'Choose always the way that seems best, however rough it may be. Custom will render it easy, and agreeable.' We have no escape from the daily necessity of making choices." Rev. Magann continues, "and the subject is therefore worthy of much serious thought."

Honus Wagner, 66, Observes Birthday Today; Ready For Another Baseball Season

"Grand Old Man" of Diamond Sport Looks Back On 29 Years In National League; Once Wanted to Quit Game to Operate a Garage

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 24.—Sixty-six years old today and as inseparable from Pittsburgh baseball as Forbes field, Honus Wagner is ready to begin another season, his 29th, in the National league.

In 21 years as a player, the "Flying Dutchman" shone as one of the game's brightest stars, leaving on the books some records never equalled.

Yet he nearly quit baseball in 1905, when the horseless carriage "got" him, much as airplanes captivate the youth of today.

He still enjoys telling how Ed Barrow, now president of the New York Yankees, found him throwing stones, like kids will, and signed him to a contract. That's how one of baseball's greatest careers started.

Started on Sandlots
Like scores of other youngsters, Wagner started playing baseball on the sandlots, then entered the professional game in 1895 in Steubenville in the old Tri-State league at what he thought was "the big salary of $35 a month."

"I stayed about two months," he recalled, "then went to play for Mansfield. From there I went to Adrian, Mich., in the Michigan State league, where I was manager for a month before I got homesick and came back to play with Warren, Pa., in the Iron and Oil league where my brother Al and all my friends were playing."

"It was early in 1896," he continued, "that Al, myself, and a few of the boys were trying to see who could throw stones the farthest over Charters creek (near Pittsburgh) when two men came up and watched us for awhile. One of them was Ed Barrow."

"He talked with me about signing for the Paterson, N. J., club (of the old Atlantic league) and I did for the 1896 season."

It was at Paterson that Wagner first drew attention of big time baseball men. And he says he'll "never forget the day" when Mr. Barney Dreyfuss, then owner of the Louisville Pirates, "came over to Paterson, to look me over. George Stallings, then manager of the Phillies, was there for the same reason."

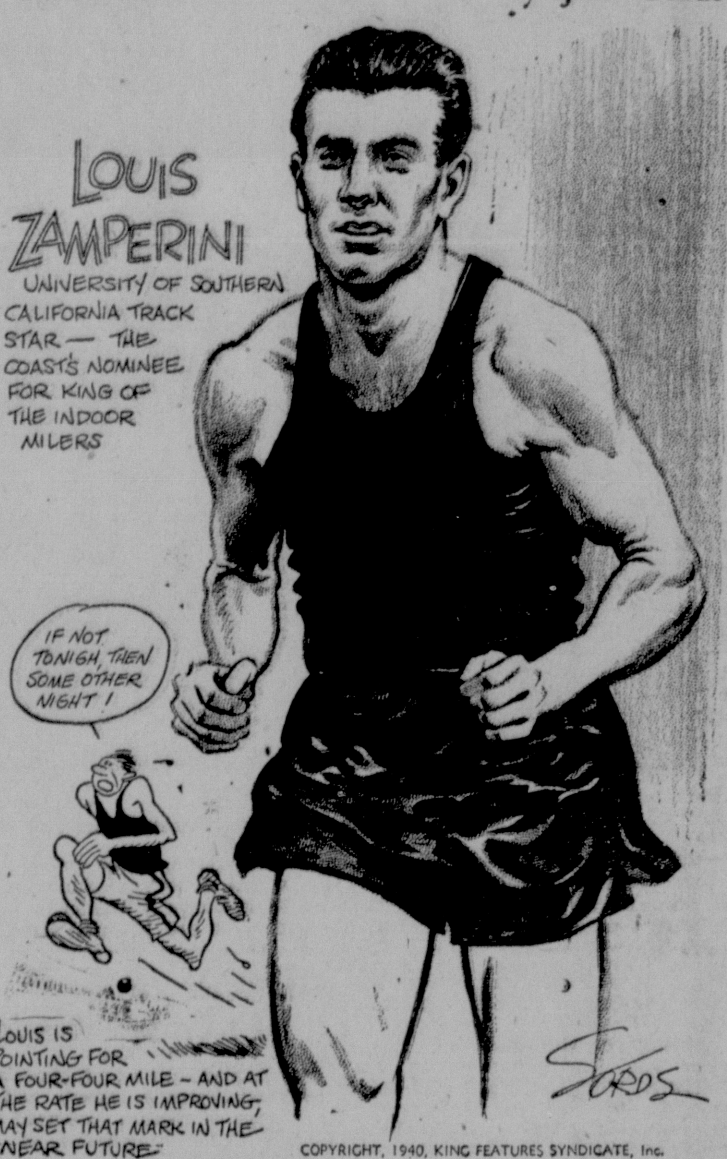

Waste of Time
"I was playing left field," chuckled Honus, "and threw two runners out at the plate, but I guess I didn't make a hit with either Mr. Dreyfuss or Stallings. George later told me he wouldn't pay my salary to Philadelphia, while Mr. Dreyfuss went back to Louisville wondering why he had wasted his time."

But Dreyfuss changed his mind. Henry Pulliam, later president of the National league, then was secretary of the Louisville club. He argued with the boss until Dreyfuss signed Wagner to a $2,000 a year contract.

That's how the Herculean Honus entered the majors. He played for the Pirates until he retired, coming to Pittsburgh from Louisville when Dreyfuss transferred the franchise. And it was the same Dreyfuss who kept him in the game, after Honus bought a small garage and wanted to quit. It was Dreyfuss who convinced him that his future was in baseball.

"He was right, too," grinned Honus, who then lived in nearby Mansfield, because "there were only three automobiles in Mansfield and I owned one of them. Why, in going through my old records I discovered I used

The lead held by Meissner's Service in the Federal league was sliced from three games to one last night as the league leaders lost two of three games with the Sanitary Foremen.

While Meissner's kepters were losing two games, the second-place Ohio Edison Dodgers gained on the league leader by posting three wins over the Eagles.

Brownie's Service remained firmly entrenched in third place by taking three games from the K. of C. In another Federal league match, the National Brass & Copper, fifth place team, won two of three games with the Sanitary Shippers.

The Endres-Gross ladies continued to set the pace in the Grate Ladies league, gaining three wins over Smith's Garage to remain safely out in front.

Second and third place teams were idle, while the fourth-place Jean Frocks lost two of three games with the Trades Class. Other ladies matches saw the Church Budget win three games from Brownie's and the Sinclairs post two wins over the Sunny Beauty Shoppe.

Quakers Beaten By Close Margin For Sixth Time of '39-40 Basketball Season

Salem Cagers Complete 16-Game Schedule With Record of Eight Wins, Eight Losses; Enter Sectional Tournament Next Week

Losing by a margin of two points or less for the sixth time of the current basketball season, Salem High school's Quakers fell before Struthers' Big Red passers, 24 to 23, on the crowded Struthers floor last night.

The game brought to a close Salem's 16-game schedule, leaving only tournament competition before the Quakers hang up their uniforms for the season. It was Salem's eighth defeat, dropping the team's record for the 1939-40 campaign to the even .500 mark.

The Quakers will enter sectional tournament competition next Tuesday night when they face a strong Youngstown East team on the East court. If they should get by East, they must win one more sectional game before qualifying for the district tournament at Kent.

The old story of a second-half let-down was repeated as the Quakers dropped a close decision to Struthers, which, by reason of its victory, became the first team from the Youngstown area to defeat the Salem lads this season.

Hold Six Point Lead
The Quakers gained a six-point lead in the first half, but saw their advantage slip away in the second half when Struthers came from behind to make a close game out of what had started out to be a Salem victory.

The Big Red trailed by only one point at the close of the third quarter, and midway in the fourth quarter gained a three-point lead. The Quakers rallied to tie the count at 21-21, when two minutes remained to play, but fell behind when Struthers connected for a field goal.

Leading by two points when one minute of playing time remained, Struthers sewed up the victory when Battista made a foul shot to increase their lead to three points. Center Knepp connected for a field goal for the Quakers in the dying seconds of the game, but the two points were not enough to put the Quakers back in the running.

The Quakers had the scoring all their own way in the first quarter, counting seven points to Struthers' two. The Big Red cagers went scoreless until late in the first period when Center Henderson flipped a field goal through the hoop for their first two points.

Remain In Front
Going into the second period on the long end of a 7 to 2 count, the Quakers remained safely out in front throughout the rest of the first half. They led 12 to 3 at halftime after outscoring Struthers five points to four in the second quarter.

Struthers, after missing frequent easy shots in the first half, found the scoring range early in the second half and started to cut down the Quakers' lead.

The Big Red held a one-point lead, 16-15, late in the third quarter, but dropped behind when the Quakers hooked a field goal late in the period to regain the lead. At the end of the third quarter, the Quakers led by one-point, 17 to 16.

Two quick field goals at the start of the fourth quarter put the Big Red passers out in front by three points. They maintained this advantage until the last two minutes when the Quakers rallied to tie the count at 21-21.

Center Henderson placed the Big Red back in the lead, 23-21, with a field goal and a short time later Battista made the free throw which clinched the victory. Knepp tipped a rebound through the hoop for the Quakers in the last 15 seconds, but all the field goal did was cut Struthers' margin from three points to one.

Struthers' zone defense throughout the game, but it was not tight enough to prevent the Quakers from getting under the basket for short range shots.

Mike Thomas, who was ousted from the game in the third quarter for committing too many fouls, led the Salem scoring with eight points. Thomas counted all of the Quakers' points in the first quarter. Les Knepp was held out of the game, but played a steady defensive game, breaking up numerous Struthers shots and doing a good job of rebounding.

A second-half rally fell short for the Salem reserves, who lost a 37 to 23 decision to Struthers reserves in a rough preliminary game. Jim Armeni paced the Salem reserves in scoring, connecting for six field goals and two free throws.

Bioff Charges Plot

In Chicago where he surrendered to police in connection with an incomplete jail sentence passed 18 years ago, William Bioff, czar of the motion picture labor unions, goes free on bail. Bioff told newsmen that the old sentence and the federal charge of income tax evasion was part of a "conspiracy" involving "Communists, the C. I. O., big money interests and the government."

CHINA MAPPING BIG OFFENSIVE

80 Divisions Are Declared
Ready To Mass

Dr. Koo said that "it is suspected" that the Central government is issuing new bank notes whenever the money is needed because of the large supply of fresh bills throughout the nation. As a consequence, prices are going up. He said rice is now four or five times higher than before the war.

Nation Continues Building
"China has adopted the slogan" Dr. Koo explained, "of 'Resist and Fight the Invader; Build Up Your Nation.' The idea back of this is not to let the war interfere too much with the main work of improving the country."

"Forty of the 62 colleges and universities destroyed by the war have been reopened in the interior. None of the students is wanted in the army, as the government expects them to be the nation's future leaders," Dr. Koo said.

According to Dr. Koo, 800,000 Chinese soldiers have penetrated the Japanese lines and are carrying on guerrilla warfare. He explained that the invaders' lines of communications were being harassed in preparation for the "big offensive." In this push China will have 3,000,000 men to throw into the war, Dr. Koo said.

Three Wives in Home, Denies Bigamy

I. I. N. Phonephoto

Floyd C. Trimble, 23, Seattle Navy yard worker, is accused of living in the same house with three wives, Norma Perry, 20, No. 1, with whom he is shown; Jennie Stoddard, 20, No. 2 (right) and Maxine, asking annulment, who said they all got along well till Floyd and Norma decided to live alone. Floyd denies bigamy, explaining that Norma and Jennie had been previously married and did not have final divorce decrees, making marriages to them illegal. Norma is said to have wed still again, without divorce.

OWNERSHIP of its own home is the most satisfactory way of housing the average family. A sense of security, neighborhood stability, and pride of possession are psychologically important to growing children. From a financial standpoint, home ownership is wisest because it costs less than renting a comparable home. This bank has money to loan to those who wish to build or buy homes of their own.
